VOL. LXI. No. 42. REDWOOD CITY, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, JANUARY 14, 1922. ESTABLISHED 1859

EXTENSION OF BROADWAY ACROSS MAIN STREET IS PROPOSED

Route of Travel Via Dumbarton Bridge Will Require Opening of New Roadway

There was a good attendance at the weekly meeting of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce Thursday evening of last week and much routine business was transacted. The following officers were present: President Frank K. Towne, Directors C. A. Lambert, C. M. Doxsee, D. R. Stafford, D. W. Williams and Secretary-Manager R. H. K. Smith.

The officers went on record as favoring the extension of Broadway across Main street to Walnut and thence to Spring. This would necessitate the buying of the Wahl block by the town, which it could well afford to do, as the travel through the town from the south would more than repay all the expenditures incurred. This will some day have to be done, as the Dumbarton bridge when completed will have a direct route through the Sweeny ranch to this city. The proposed thoroughfare must come in this way, so it is proper to prepare for it now.

New members were elected as follows: Ross & Ross, A. Hynding, C. S. North, Union Ice Co., Mrs. Mary L. Wool, A. W. Grimmenstein and W. H. Lipp.

A general meeting of the members was held at the secretary's office last night at which a number of important matters were considered.

The industrial welfare committee is now looking up the matter of financing a cement manufacturing plant and the question of telephone connections and rates to Atherton. The legislative committee has under consideration the water and power act.

Tomorrow afternoon and evening a double bill will be a big attraction with Alice Calhoun in "That Matrimonial Web." Also "Buck Jones" in "One Man's Trail," a wonderful drama.

"The Queen of Sheba" is to be the attraction for Monday and Tuesday evenings of next week, on show starting at 8 o'clock. Prices will be Children 25 cents; general admission 50 cents; loge seats 75 cents. War tax extra.

On Friday evening of next week another delightful picture based on a story by Fannie Hurst, author of "Humoresque," will be shown, entitled "Just Around the Corner." It is a story of New York's East Side life. It is portrayed by a brilliant cast, embracing Margaret Sedden, Louis Sargent, Sigrid Holmquist, Edward Phillips, Fred C. Thomas and Peggy Paw.

W. J. O'Brien will contribute to the evening programs, often singing a few numbers, some of his old time favorites that have been rendered in Redwood City years ago and also some new ones he brought with him from New York. Mr. O'Brien spent four years in the theatrical business there.

The stage of the Sequoia has been equipped with a new lighting effect preparatory for vaudeville and high class vocal and instrumental acts which Mr. O'Brien will introduce for the enjoyment of the people of Redwood City. Mr. O'Brien assures the people that they will be the very best or they will not appear.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS

At the meeting of the county supervisors Monday the reports of the county auditor and county treasurer were received and filed.

A request was received from the city trustees asking that bootlegging in the vicinity of that town be suppressed. The supervisors will take action at the next meeting.

Disputed claims were considered. E. C. Cottier's bill for labor and material at the county hospital, originally $480, was ordered paid after being reduced to $437.10.

The National Auto Renting Company asked $8 for bringing a witness from Daly City to Redwood City. The claim was rejected as excessive.

A claim of $10 for two days' services presented by Ferguson Owen, Burlingame constable, in connection with the Hightower trial, was rejected on recommendation of the district attorney.

John Larrouy's claim for $20 for services as substitute jaintor at the court house was rejected because he had been paid by the regular janitor.

Sheriff Sheehan's claim of $263.53 for getting Y. Yamamoto, Japanese kidnaper, was rejected on the ground that the girl's father was responsible for the bill.

Action was delayed until the next meeting on the claims of Carl Eisenschimel, E. L. Heinrich and Dr. Victors, expert witnesses in the Hightower case. The district attorney reported that Eisenschimel's bill was excessive but the other two reasonable.

The telephone company was instructed to remove the telephone from the home of Judge Porter Lamb at Burlingame and the bill for service was referred to Supervisor Brown.

Supervisor MacBain was placed in charge of all work and supplies for the court house, county jail, detention home and social service commission.

J. J. Wilson put in a claim of $15 for burying a dead cow. It was approved by Constable Walsh, but the supervisors deferred action.

The transportation appropriation of $140 a month for United States deputies working on squirrel extermination was ordered discontinued on February 1.

The telephone was ordered transferred from the home of former Traffic Officer Vallejo to that of Mr. Quinlan, the present incumbent.

Funge was a candidate for sheriff at the last county election and made a big run. The couple resided at Colma, where Funge was engaged in the cattle business.

In her complaint Mrs. Funge says she was married to Funge on January 3, 1914, and that he deserted her on July 2, 1920. She also alleges extreme cruelty and asks for the custody of their two children, Don L., aged 6 years, and Robert, aged 2, and alimony for the support of herself and children in the amount of $200 a month.

Mrs. Funge states that her husband is capable of earning from $500 to $600 a month in his business.

Mary Scott Martin and Walter S. Martin transfer a little over 20 acres near the country club at Hillsborough to Rudolph Spreckels for $120,000. The land is improved with ornamental trees and shrubbery, but it has no building on it of any kind. The site is one of the choicest in that locality. Near by are the estates of W. H. Crocker, the late Mrs. W. G. Irwin, George Newhall, Robert H. Smith, George A. Pope and others. Mr. Spreckels contemplates erecting a $500,000 residence in the spring. It is to be one of the finest in that district. Spreckels is very wealthy and will no doubt expend large sums in creating a home that will be second to none in the state.

HUNTING SEASON CLOSES

The open season for quail, ducks and rabbits closes an hour after sundown tomorrow evening. The season has not been as good as in past years. Birds were scarce. Heretofore the season opened on April 1.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS GIVE SUCCESSFUL PLAYS

Maude Stilleson, '22

Sigma Delta Kappa again showed its talent in dramatics when "Food" and "Dolls" were presented lats Saturday evening. Both plays were short comedies and the young thespians certainly deserve credit for their dramatic ability which made both plays a success. Miss Boyle coached the two plays and worked industriously with the aid of a few students to arrange the scenery and settings.

"Food" was a comical farce on the high cost of living. Exaggerated food prices were specially centred around the much desired pullets eg. Irene, the wife, which part was cleverly taken by Lucy Bentley, had an accursed craving for eggs, which luxury was the limit of poor hubby's pocketbook. Maude Stilleson as Basil, the husband, was very good as a gentleman of the future generation of costly eggs. Mura Stilleson was the ardent lover who broke "his" oath as officer of the food trust to gratify the wish of Irene by giving her the precious egg he had in his possesison. The innocent little egg was the cause of a most tragic ending of the play.

"Dolls" was a comedy of three scenes and was a production of the Christmas season. In the first scene preparation was being made for the Christmas morning. Madeline Shields, did well in her part as the mother and Agnes Flynn as Annie, the maid, was particularly interesting because of her Irish brogue and amusing actions. Dolores Lyons successfully took the part of the little girl who was so excited waiting for Santa Claus to come.

The second scene showed all of the dolls in action. Small dolls of the first scene were exceptionally well characterized by the girls who took part. Alice Perry was a very fashionable lady doll who considered herself among the elite set of dolls. The Marie Antoinette doll was artictically portrayed by Dorothy Beebe, who wore the old colonial costume so familiar to every American. Irene Crosby as the harlequin doll was an enthusiastic member of the unusual meeting. Adelina Hall as the soldier doll stood guard over the throng to prevent them from being caught in such an undignified position. Erma Follett made a darling peasant doll of the Anglo-Saxon type. The Japanese doll looked very original in her typical oriental costume. This part was taken by Marie Ellisade. Amelia Johnson was an adorable baby doll who insisted that her clothes had real buttons and buttonholes. These dolls considered themselves far above the sawdust wreck (Bessie Payne), who was a last year's product. The poor sawdust imbecile was cruelly treated by her superior sisters. Like our ancestors, she did not believe in all this nonsense of votes for dolls and other absurd notions of this day and age. Treated so insultingly, Genevieve finally gained revenge on Christmas morning, when the little girl rescued her from the waste basket and cuddled her in preference to all the other new dolls.

This play was greatly enjoyed by all who saw it.

During the intermission Mr. Carrington sang several songs which he had composed, and Miss Elizabeth Gillespie also favored the audience with a selection.

On Friday evening, January 29, an oriental dance will be given at the Redwood City Woman's Clubhouse by Gamma Epsilon, one of the newest clubs of Sequoia Hi. Tickets will go on sale next Monday and will be sold to anyone attending Sequoia or to any member of the alumni association. General admission will be 50 cents and the proceeds will go toward making our annual school paper a success. Every class and organization in the school is requested to do its part in raising money for this fund and Gamma Epsilon is going to take this opportunity to do its share.

There is a mysterious atmosphere surrounding the preparations for the affair and many lovely oriental schemes for decoration are being worked out by the members of the club.

A delightful evening is promised to all who attend and as there is a limit to the number of tickets, those desirous of obtaining them are given warning not to delay in doing so. Although there will be an oriental atmosphere about the affair, the dance will not be in costume. Those desiring tickets may obtain them either from the club members or from Miss Boyle of the high school.

Impersonations

Next Monday afternoon at 2:20 the students of Sequoia Union High School have a rare treat in store for them. Loriman Percival, an actor of good standing, is visiting the different high schools of the vicinity, favoring them with a presentation of the best known scenes from the most popular Shakspearean plays. He comes highly recommended, having worked with the Maitland players of San Francisco and others of equal standing. There will be a general admission charge of 25 cents and the public, if interested, is welcome to witness the performance, which will be held in the high school assembly hall.

Ellis Johnson, justice of the peace in the 1rst township, sentenced each of the accused to pay a fine of $200. They appealed to the superior court and that tribunal has decided against them, so they will have to pay the fines. There can be not other appeal. The two young men live in San Francisco.

THE BRIDGE PROSPECTS

It appears that San Francisco and Oakland have come to a parting of the ways on the bridge question. The big town on the west side of the bay wants direct rail connection by convenient means with territory to the east. But Oakland, having secured terminals for transcontinental lines, is not a bit in favor of seeing them transferred across the bay, no matter if it may be more convenient to travelers and shippers. So at the last meeting of bridge promoters at Oakland a resolution was adopted to the effect that the commercial men on the east side of the bay would oppose any movement that would have for its ultimate effect the removal of any terminals from Oakland.

That clarifies things. From now on San Franciscoc will go ahead with the bridge agitation, paying no further attention to Oakland. Co-operation is more than probable in the effort to build the bridge at Dumbarton, resulting in tremendous advantage to San Mateo county. It is to be hoped that an agreement on the financing of the project will be made at an early date. Such co-operation will be a great thing for both San Francisco and San Mateo county.

EDUCATIONAL COSTS

The people of California own the state university. According to the rule of ownership the people should have something to say regarding its management. Yet according to the latest ruling of the attorney general the management of the institution is supreme and can do as it may please. The attorney general points out that tuition can be charged in any sum desired, although there is another provision of law that says charges are to be reduced to make the institution as nearly free as possible to California students. So the tuition fees will continue indefinitely.

It is unfortunately true that the bigger an educational institution becomes the higher the charges to the students. It is the same with hotels and other establishments. Charges must be made which will provide the funds necessary for fixed charges. So it comes to pass that only people of large means can patronize the biggest and most luxurious hotels. It is developing that only those possessed of considerable money can attend the colleges, whether public or private institutions. It is an unfortunate development, as the governing idea in establishing these institutions of learning is to enable as many young people as possible to receive the benefit of higher education.

One cause of this high cost is the extravagant manner in which colleges are managed. A visit at any of the big institutions will reveal conditions of wastefulness that would be intolerable in business establishments or in educational institutions that are conducted for gain. Special buildings are put up for each branch of instruction; each instructor is assigned special quarters; then those quarters are used for perhaps three or four hours a day, five days during the week of school terms, and are absolutely idle for several months in the year. A fuller utilization of the facilities provided, or a decrease in the elaborate provision for instructors would cause a big saving that would enable the colleges to be conducted on smaller incomes, thus reducing costs to a level that would enable people of moderate means to attend.

The University of California is becoming huge and unwieldy. It has a branch in the southern part of the state and also conducts the farm school at Davis. It would seem to be more economical, if a state university is needed in the southern part of the state, that an independent college should be conducted. It would be more economical and would render ujst as efficient service. Also the agricultural college should be a separate institution. All being under one general management causes greater overhead expense. For instance, in the accounting, it looks like there is triplication of work. The branch institutions must keep their accounts locally; these in turn must be reported to the parent institution, and after that must be examined and approved by the state board of control. Were they separate it would eliminate one of the reports.

Then also, when an executive is in charge of an immense establishment he naturally comands a big salary, while his subordinates in charge of branch institutions receive as much pay as if they were running the enterprise independently. The increased expense does not add a bit to efficiency. So in the interest of economy there should be a separation. Such a plan works well with the various normal schools and there is no reason why it should not be put in force with the state university and its subordinate divisions.

It is customary to throw rocks at China's educational system In that country higher education can be attained only by those of great financial resources. If the Chinese system is so awful, why is it that the California institution is tending in exactly that direction? There is but one way in which to correct the tendency. The legislature can act. It is to be hoped that the legislative body will give serious consideration to the threatened condition of the state's leading educational institution. It is supposedly conducted for the benefit of all the people; in reality it is being developed as a place where only the children of the rich will be tolerated.

RESPECT FOR LAW

In many sections of the country it is customary for law enforcement officers to proceed on the theory that they can do anything they please if they can get away with it. Rights of individuals have been swept aside ruthlessly and rank violations of all laws of decency and right have been abrogated in the name of law enforcement. Likewise plain provisions of law have been swept aside when the officers have so desired. Just an instance is when the members of the state traffic officers' association decided they would not enforce the state law for a period of sixty days after it had become effective. They had no more right to do that than the sheriffs' association would have to declare that the law against murder should not be enforced for a year. That disregard of duty on the part of law enforcement officers has had a most pernicious effect. Others seeing that the law officers have assumed the right to violate laws have followed the example. So now we have the specially notorious condition of bootleggers ignoring not only state but United States laws. What is worse, they are getting away with it most generally.

Some judicial officers contend that private citizens should take up the work of law enforcement. It is a very mistaken notion. They might as well argue that the private citizens should assume judicial authority and decide cases. Private citizens hire the law enforcement officers. Those officers have their duties specifically defined. They are paid for the performance of those duties. Some are pleasant, some decidedly otherwise. They never fail to draw their money, whether they perform the unpleasant duties or not. A private citizen of California, should he undertake the enforcement of law violations, would find himself in a decidedly uncomfortable position. Offenders naturally would be incensed at interference with unlawful conduct; officers would be angry because it would be a demonstration of inefficiency on their part; the public would rail at the private law enforcer because he would expose conditions which they prefer to keep under cover. No community likes to be shown up as a hotbed of crime and iniquity.

Also the private citizens would be compelled to devote his time and money to the work without getting a cent of compensation, while the officers of the law draw their pay as usual without earning it.

So it comes about that the bootleggers and other engaged in unlawful pursuits go their ways without molestation. It would be very unpleasant for the officers to try to get them. The public does not like it to be known that criminals are operating in the community, and officers regard this as a justification for the general apathy on their part.

What is needed is some drastic action like that of the supervisors not long ago, when they decreed that the killing of people on San Mateo county highways must be stopped, even if the whole traffic force had to be discharged and a new one secured. The attitude of the public must change. A bootlegger must be regarded as a dangerous criminal instead of an amusing dodger of policemen. It may be necessary to get officers in power who will take their duties seriously and pay as much attention to enforcement of law as to drawing pay. When the bootlegger shall come to be regarded as a dangerous enemy to society, even as the murderer is, and the law against him enforced just as stringently, it will be much better for all concerned.

No matter whether one believes in prohibition or not, it is his duty as a citizen to demand enforcement of law as it stands. If any such regulation is obnoxious to the majority it is manifestly the better plan to seek its repeal by legal means rather than by plain violation. The law must be respected. Disregarding one law is sure to lead to disregard of others, with resulting demoralization.

A "live wire" ought to be dead game.

Duck Hunting Reminiscences

By CLAUDE FOX

Story No. 38

Among those of my acquaintances and companions in the pursuit of wild water fowl who have passed over the divide, there never was a more agreeable and amiable associate, a more thorough sportsman and a more perfect gentleman than Clint, brother of the late A. F. Waltermire of Belmont. He was a man brim full of jolly, innocent amusement, a lover of the great outdoors, the hills, the woods and the marshes; he found music in the chirp of the tree squirrel, the twitter of the quail and the deep call of the mallard drake to its mate, and he was never so happy as when with shotgun in hand he pursued the feathered beauties of the creeks and bay or whipped the streams on the coast side of our county for the speckled members of the finny tribe which at one time were so plentiful.

It is indeed difficult to understand why fate should call such a man hence in the prime of his life, with not an enemy in the world and living every day of his existence ever mindful of doing unto others as he would have others do unto him.

Al, his brother, the boniface who for so many years presided over the destinies of the old Waltermire Hotel at Belmont, needs no introduction to many of those who peruse this article, for he was known from one end of the county to the other. Year after year the family home and hotel which still stands rang with laughter, song and merriment of hundreds of guests who at one time or another assembled to do homage to the genial proprietor on occasions of jollifications or political indulgences. And, take it from me, he was some politician. If ever a man could make Rome howl for the Grand Old Party and its candidates that man was A. F. Waltermire of Belmont. But that is another story; we will return to the subjetc of this article.

Clint Waltermire has long since passed to a land where the laws of man cannot reach, and so far as I am concerned in relating the incidents herein narrated, if we transgressed the law, as the learned counsel would say, the statute of limitations has long since run, so we will pass this story up to print.

Clint made his home with his brother and at the time whereof I write was employed in the United States customhouse in San Francisco and commuted each day back and forth to and from his work. At an earlier period in his life he had met with one of those unfortunate accidents which occur almost daily in the handling of firearms, which caused the loss of his left hand and forearm, amputation being necessary between the elbow and wrist.

What would you young duck hunters of today think of seeing a man with but one good arm and but a portion of the other, going down alone into the marshes in a sculling boat and returning loaded down with teal, spoonbill, widgeon and mallard? What would you think to see such a man coming down a steep sidehill, through short brush, with his hunting dog working close to him, and droping nine out of ten quail that flushed in front of his deadly aim? Think what you wish, but such a man was Clint Waltermire, one of the most beautiful and accurate wing shots who ever pulled the trigger of a No. 12 shotgun.

Now down where the thriving residents of the city of Burlingame live in their cozy bungalows, just west of the business portion of the city, between the line of the Southern Pacific and the old county road, now the highway, there was at that time quite a depression in the ground where the winter rains collected, forming a small lake known as the Lamphere pond, after a former owner of the property. The busy real estate man has since filled it in and converted what was an ideal duckpond into valuable building sites.

As Clint Waltermire perused the daily morning paper each day on his way to the metropolis he would cast an eye of scrutiny in the direction of the Lamphere pond as the train sped by, and what he could not see with that quick eye of his was not worth seeing.

It was along in August, if I remember correctly, about the latter part of the month, when he sent a message to me by one of the boys on the train, that he wished to see me on important business, and for me to come up to Belmont that evening. While I knew there were some birds in the marshes already, there was at that early day a law which precluded duck shooting until the 15th of September. The quail season was also closed, but there was no law against shooting rabbits, so I pondered over what was the nature of his urgent business. You could not call up a sweet voiced central in those days, wireless was unheard of, a man who talked about flying machines was considered insane and the Southern Pacific trains had quit running for the day. So I took an ordinary horse and cart and drove to Belmont post haste, for I knew Clint was not given to idle talk.

I am going to tell you the tale as he unfolded it to me, word for word, as nearly as I can remember it, and in doing so I wish to ask you young duck hunters of today, how would you like to have a similar story whispered in your ear, and also what would you have done under the circumstances?

As I drove up in front of the hotel Frank and Henry Yount and some of the boys from Morgan's oyster house were standing on the porch enjoying their after supper cigars, and from within behind the bar I could hear Al call out, "Clint, there's your partner!" As I was tying up the horse, out he came through the broad open doorway.

"What's up, Clint?" I called out. "A drive down the road with a couple of Belmont's fairest?"

"Not much," he quickly replied; "something better than that; here, take a cigar and come over to the fence at the garden where we can talk undisturbed.

There was a merry twinkle in his eye and a broad smile played over his frank countenance which almost spelled his thoughts. We lit our cigars and walked over to the picket fence and cypress hedge which enclosed the garden until a point was reached where the guests on the front porch could not hear us. Tapping me on the shoulder, he started in.

"Say, boy, I've got something good, too good to throw away, and that is why I sent for you. You know the old Lamphere pond down between San Mateo and Millbrae.

"Of course I do, Clint. Go on."

"Well," he continued, "I had not paid much attention to it of late, as I had been going up on the 7:45 train, but during this week we had lots of extra work to do, so I took an earlier train which passes there just after daylight. What do you think, each morning that pond has been full of ducks, say about a hundred, and most of them are mallard. Now I'll tell you what we will do. You drive up here early Sunday morning; be sure to be here at 2 o'clock and I will have breakfast all ready; we must be there before it starts to break daylight; it will be the dark of the moon, just what we want; we can pull off the shoot in thirty minutes and make our getaway without any trouble and no one will be the wiser. The nearest house is half a mile away and the only officer around those parts is the constable at San Mateo and on Sunday morning he sleeps late. If we don't get those mallards now someone else will. What do you say? Are you with me?"

Would I be with him? Why, I could already see those old drakes leading in as the dawn was breaking.

"If I'm alive, Clint, I'll be with you," was my reply.

He gave me a hearty slap on the shoulder and then we went in to see Brother Al to bind the bargain. As I started for home he whispered:

"Don't forget to bring your dog, as mine has got his feet full of squirrel grass burrs and can hardly walk. Be sure—2 o'clock."

I didn't need any alarm clock to waken me at 1 a. m. that Sunday morning and at 1:50 drove up to the Waltermire Hotel. Clint stood on the porch awaiting me. He had been out in the center of the road listening and he could hear the clatter of my horse's hoofs a half mile away, so he knew I was coming. A steaming hot breakfast awaited me, which was quickly disposed of, and we were off. Down the silent, deserted road we drove, not meeting a single rig, quite different from what it is today.

Just east of the pond was a gum tree lane which ran down toward the railroad, which we followed for about a quarter of a mile, when we stopped, tied up and blanketed the horse. A high fog had drifted in from the ocean and a light mist, almost like a rain, was falling. It was as dark as Egypt, but a grand morning for our purpose. Old Ted, my dog, knew well what was on the bill of fare, and he fairly danced with delight around us as we slowly crossed the old cow pasture in the direction of the pond. Before we reached the water's edge a biddy mallard jumped up and nearly quacked her head off.

"Sounds good to me," said Clint, and you bet it did.

The pond ran nearly northeast and southwest and was just a little too wide to shoot across, but we knew the incoming birds would lead in about the center. Going around to the west side, so as to face the daylight as it broke, we sat down by the side of some scrub willows that bordered the edge of the pond. We had a half hour to wait, as the fog delayed the break of day, so we smoked on in silence, knowing that the dawn was not far off.

Have you ever been there, my boys of today, knowing to a dead certainty what is going to happen shortly, your shotgun lying across your lap, with every nerve on the high and ears strained to catch the whir of wings which you know will soon come?

"She's breaking, Clint," I whispered, as a faint flush could be seen in the eastward through the tall gum trees, and I moved fifty yards further to the south so we could cover the whole pond. No sooner had I sat down beside a small willow bush than a bunch of eight or ten mallard came sneaking in and lit right in front of Clint, not 30 yards away. It was too dark to see them on the water, but well we knew what they were, for a mallard has a peculiar whir to its wings which once heard is never forgotten. It was a case of wait for a little more light. Old Ted stood wagging his tail beside me as though wondering why we did not shoot. Fully five minutes passed and then suddenly Clint let go both barrels. I could see three or four birds raise from the water and come toward me and managed to drop the nearest one..

"I've got four," called out my partner. "Keep the dog in if you can. We have got to work fast."

Ted had taken the water on the jump at the first flash and he was soon back with a big drake for Clint. Drawing out my duck strap I tield "Old Faithful" up to a willow so he would not scare the next flock that appeared. In they came, from six to a dozen in a bunch, but the trouble was they all came about the same time. Clint generally got the first shot as the birds led in from toward the railroad, but they passed out by me as they made the swing to return to the bay. Picking our birds we shot deliberately, not wasting ammunition, except to shoot over a cripple. Poor old Ted sat whining as though his heart would break. He could hear the ducks falling and tugged away hard on the strap. But his turn came soon. In half an hour the flight had ceased and our shoot was over. Now for our getaway. Letting the dog loose, he certainly had a picnic. All the birds were dead and we could readily see nearly all were mallard. Ted would try to bring in two at a time and then have to give it up in despair, for the ducks were so large. Finally the dog's work was done. Oh, what a bunch! Eighteen birds, sixteen of them mallard, with one teal and one sprig. I often wondered where that sprig came from, for that species was scarce then. Clint had killed four drakes the first shot. Oh, for a picture, but it was the wrong time of the year to waste thoughts over photographs.

We were soon up to the buggy and as we turned into the county road and headed south I tapped the little mare gently with the whip to speed us on our way. We still had in our minds visions of that constable at San Mateo who slept late on Sunday mornings.

Just before we reached the old Crystal Springs road to Spanishtown Clint suggested that we might as well be hung for a sheep as a lamb; that he knew where there was a large flock of quail, two-thirds grown, and it was no trick to get them, so we turned off to the right and drove up the San Mateo creek, through the Poor Farm and out onto the road that skirted the east side of the lake. At Wildcat canyon we found the quail just where Clint said we would and driving them into some short brush killed fourteen in ten minutes. It was necessary to make our stay very brief in that locality, so we went up the old grade toward Belmont. Just at the top of the hill were some narrow gulches. Ted was pretty tired, but he responded nobly and we killed half a dozen rabbits in as many shots. We could have got a dozen, but it was a crime to ask more of that old curly brown spaniel, so we called it quits and gave the dog the place of honor in the back of the buggy with the ducks.

Just after 10 o'clock we were back in Belmont. Al Waltermire rushed out to greet us as we drove up. He seemed to read our faces and knew we had not failed, but he was wholly unprepared to see the bunch of game we carried into the little back room behind the bar. We had thoughtfully taken a couple of grain sacks along and it was an easy matter to pass the few who were reading in the bar room unnoticed. When we had everything out of the buggy and into the little room Al came in.

"Dump them out on the floor, boys," he said, "so I can get a look at them."

We did as he wished. When he caught sight of that bunch of mallard he let out a whoop that could be heard at San Carlos.

"Everybody, everybody, come and have a drink with Al Waltermire!" he yelled.

You would have thought it was the Fourth of July. The whole town of Belmont soon became aware of the fact that there was something doing across the street. And to make matters worse, as each friend came in he would take them into that little back room to display our prowess.

"But," he would admonish each one as he placed his forefinger to his lips, "mum is the word and don't forget it."

There was great doings at the old hotel that afternoon. I had to have dinner with Clint anl then to remain for supper. Al fed old Ted enough to last him a week.

Such pleasant ocacsions must have an ending, however, and at 8 that evening I left for home, after a shoot the like of which I never expect to have again, but memories cannot be denied me, and every time I pass through Burlingame my thoughts run back to the old Lamphere pond, of that dark, foggy morning in August years ago; of old Ted and those mallard and above all of the noble, unselfish partner who was with me that day, now sleeping beneath the beautiful slopes of Cypress Lawn, Clint Waltermire of Belmont.

INTERESTING INFORMATION IN REPORT OF HORTICULTURAL COMMISSIONER

A. W. Tate, Jr., county horticultural commissioner, in his December report to the supervisors gave some very interesting information. The details of inspections and other work show that he and his assistants have been quite busy safeguarding the agricultural interests of the county. He reported as follows:

To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of San Mateo County: At a meeting of the Palo Alto Berry Growers' Association at Runnymede, December 9, which I attended, my offer to arrange for a demonstration of pruning trees and berry vines was accepted. Through the courtesy of the University of California I was enabled to secure the services of Prof. A. H. Hendrickson, who gave the demonstration on Wednesday, December 28. A practical illustration of modern pruning methods for trees and berry vines was given to an interested audience of 75 growers of fruit trees and berries. The interest taken was more than could have been expected, considering the comparatively small fruit acreage in the county, practically all sections being represented in the attendance.

In connection with the above I wish to call attention to the rapidly increasing importance of the berry industry, particularly in the southern end of the county. As was shown in my annual report, a large acreage of strawberries was set out last planting season, in addition to the bush berries. Judging from shipments already arriving and from the best information available, this will be more than duplicated this season. Aside from fresh berries shipped during the year, berry plants to the value of over $10,000 produced here and sent outside the county have been inspected by me. I may state that I am giving the inspection of berry plants grown in the county and offered for sale my personal attention as far as possible, with the view of seeing that nothing but clean stock is placed upon the market. It is in this way only that the business of plant propagation, which the growers are building up, can be retained.

Through an oversight the fumigation of 832 sacks of horse beans under the supervision of Inspector Mowry, was omitted from my November report.

Inspection of Nursery Stock

Ten thousand berry plants, grown in the county and offered for sale, were found infested with scale and were cleaned at the expense of the owner; 41 plants, in shipments offered for inspection, were found infested with crown gall and borers and destroyed.

Albert Kurtz, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz, will leave on Monday for Berkeley to resume his studies at the state university. He is preparing himself for the law and later will attend Hastings Law School at San Francisco. Young Kurtz is a very bright young man and will certainly make his mark in the profession he has chosen to follow.

Court Menlo, Ancient Order of Foresters, installed the following officers for the term on Wednesday evening: Fred Hummel, past chief ranger; Henry Wright, chief ranger; George Nunn, sub-chief ranger, and John Daly, recording secretary. After the ceremony a sumptuous repast was served in the lodge hall.

On Thursday evenin the Menlo Park Horticultural Society elected ficers for the term as follows: Percy Copp, president; George Nunn, treasurer; John Daly secretary. The society is preparing to give a big flower show during the spring. The annual show will take place in the fall.

The award to dealers for furnishing supplies to the base hospital for the quarter ending March 31, 1922, was announced yesterday. Palo Alto business men secured nearly all the contracts.

The rainfall for the season has been 7.15 inches, as against 9.40 inches at this time last year. The season's rainfall is below normal.

Judge John L. Hudner, sitting for Judge Buck, on Thursday granted permission to the Mary's Help Hospital to sell the 60 acres of land belonging to the institution here. One of the trustees of the institution, J.B. Casserly of San Mateo, testified that the land was valued at $1,000 an acre. The hospital needs the funds and the land is bringing in no revenue. The petition was garnted. The property, which was given to the hospital by the late Kate Johnston, will now be sold in small tracts.

Mrs. Charles Coxin and daughter have taken apartments on Santa Cruz avenue, having rented the Porter house. They occupied the M. F. Duff building on Oak Grove avenue for many years, but it was recently sold to Mr and Mrs. Phelps of Redwood City, who moved into the dwelling during the week.

The Reynards have moved to San Mateo, having sold their home on Santa Cruz avenue to a Palo Alto party.

When it comes to weather predictions Dr. Whitewolf has Father Richard beaten. He predicted the storm of yesterday two days before. He uses the Indian signs in making his forecasts. The doctor very rarely misses his predictions. Nine times out of ten he was right.

It was rumored yesterday that the E. W. Hopkins home on Oak Grove avenue had been sold to San Francisco parties. In days gone by it was one of the show places of Menlo Park. Mr. Hopkins has not occupied the place for two years. Chris Reis owned the property 50 years ago. Before it was purchased by Mr Hopkins 30 years ago it was owned by Mr. Castle, the wholesale grocer.

Miss Irene Carter has returned from St. Luke's Hospital, where she underwent an operation for appendicitis some time ago. The young lady will be able to resume studies at the high school at Redwood City next week. She is a member of the senior class.

A wedding of unusual importance was that of Harry Bernard Doughty, the enterprising butcher, and Miss Marguerite J. Gale, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A G. Gale, that took place in the Church of the Nativity Sunday at high noon. Father George Lacombe officiated. Miss Susie Gale, the pretty sister of the blushing bride, acted as bridesmaid, while David Moore of San Mateo, an intimate friend of the Gale family, attended the bridegroom. The church was crowded with friends of the happy young couple. After the impressive ceremony the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a wedding breakfast was served. Mrs. Doughty was born and raised in Menlo Park, where she has many friends and admirers. Mr. Doughty has been engaged in the butcher business in Menlo Park for several years. He is an enterprising and progressive citizen well thought of by all. He recently purchased the J. R. Doyle home on Laurel avenue, where the young couple are receiving their many friends. Their numerous friends wish them every happiness vouchsafed married life.

The city engineer after investigation has recommended against making the Palo Alto auto camp at Ravenswood a municipal enterprise, the board of public works has approved the recommendation and transmitted it to the city council. It is probable that the latter body will reject the chamber of commerce proposal that the camp be taken over by the city of Palo Alto.

RAPP REAPPOINTED

Francis T. Rapp of San Mateo has been reappointed county probation officer by Judge Buck to serve for a period of two years commencing January 1. Rapp has served as the probation officer for the past six years and received the unanimous endorsement of the county probation board, the social service commission and many private citizens for reappointment to the position in recognition of his valuable services to the county.

If you can't be original, be natural—there is hardly anything so original as that.

FIRE PROTECTION FOR PESCADERO

Pescadero, nestling in the mountains of the coast side of the county, may now boast of one of the best fire protection equipments of any town of its size in California. This has been brought about by the cooperation of its enterprising and progressive citizens and also by the aid of the good women of the little town.

Some time ago the village was almost destroyed by fire, the origin of which was never discovered. Many of the main buildings were swept by the flames and considerable loss was entailed. The citizens were aroused They determined the town would be prepared for another conflagration. It is now in a position to fight any fire that may occur.

J. C Williamson, one of the most progressive citizens of Pescadero and San Mateo county, recently went to San Francisoc and purchased an up-to-date pump at his own expense. He shipped this to his store. He gave the use of a large tank at the rear of his place of business to the fire department. On Thursday all the good men of the village agreed to give a day's labor to establish a system of fire protection. The pump bought by Mr. Williamson was installed. Pipe was laid to the creek near by and the tank connected with the pump, thus a good supply of water was secured. Six hundred feet of mains were laid on the principal street and 400 on Ocean avenue and past the homes of Asa Weeks and Dr. Thompson, and a pump house was erected. Previously a hose cart and 300 feet of hose were bought from San Francisco. These were properly housed. The women of the village assisted the men in every way and by night the work was completed and Pescadero given ample fire protection. All was done by the cooperation of the good citizens. The community center has agreed to devote a portion of its profits from the moving picture shows to help pay the expenses of the fire department and to add further equipment to it. In unity there is strength, by working together the people of Pescadero may now boast of ample fire protection. Pescadero has shown a good example to other towns. Hillsborough, San Mateo and Burlingame might profit by it.

INTERESTING PROGRAM AT RAVENSWOOD SCHOOL

The program committee of the Ravenswood Parent-Teacher Association has announced the order of exercises for literary night, the fourth Saturday in January. It was decided to entertain the Boy Scouts on the evening of the second Saturday of this month in appreciation of the work the boys are doing. Badges will be awarded to those who deserve them. This was to have been done at previous meeting of the colony but was postponed and will be a part of the program on this occasion. A volunteer committee to confer with the boys was called for and Mrs. J. F. Collins, Mrs. Len Follett and Mrs. R. S. Wolverton responded.

Refreshments for the occasion are to be provided by Mrs M. Oleson, Mrs. S. W. Hull, Mrs. J. Cairns, Mrs. R. G. White, Mrs. A. L. Reagan and Mrs. F. L. Gates

Registration books will be open at this meeting and everyone not on the list will be welcome to sign up.

NEW SCHEME IN BANKING

Something new in extra compensation has been evolved by the executive committee of the Bank of Italy, the announcement of this feature forming a holiday greeting to the bank's employees.

Instead of the usual Christmas or New Year's present in cash given to the members of the organization, the Bank of Italy has opened a special bank account for each eligible employee and deposited therein a percentage of the annual salary based on each individual's length of service. Employees who have been in the service of the bank for one year receive 5 per cent of their annual salary as extra compensation, and for each additional year's employment 1 per cent is added until the figure reaches 10 per cent.

The constructive feature of the plan lies in the fact that withdrawals from these accounts cannot be made until the annual compensation reaches 10 per cent. It is contemplated that this will permit each employee to accumulate a comfortable "nest egg" that may be profitably invested or devoted to some worth while project. The payment of a cash bonus it is felt lacks this constructive feature and frequently it proves of slight benefit to the employee.

In addition to this extra compensation the Bank of Italy provides life insurance for its employees, has established a pension fund of long standing and offers a generous sick benefit plan.

SOME MUSINGS

A philosopher must get a good bit of fun by looking straight into the minds of small men who are trying to impress the world with their bigness, and laughing at the queer antics the small men's thoughts are performing

Another thing that's funny is to watch a man who battles the world successfully all day long go down in battle before the wife when he's ten minutes late for his evening meal.

One indication that we're getting back to normalcy is finding the majority of men "hard up" again who spent money like princes for a few years.

An insurance agent must have harsh thoughts when after fighting with a prospect for weeks and finally getting his application all signed for a fat policy the doctor refuses to pass the prospect.

You can't get something for nothing, but every fond father realizes when the bills for his daughter's dance frocks come in that it is easy to get nothing for something.

Knowledge every father should impart to his son: Learn to save before you learn to shave.

The biggest coward is the one who is afraid to do right.

When a man is advised to "take a change and rest" the doctor takes the change while the patient takes the rest.

Rich men don't really deserve as much sympathy as some poor men think.

Perhaps the only thing more pathetic than an old woman who makes herself look like a young girl, is a young girl who makes herself up like a woman.

You pay attention to what you eat; others will pay attention to what you drink.

There are two kinds of men—those who think a dinner is a failure if they are not called upon to speak and those who think it is a failure if they are.

The reason old bachelors are harder to capture than widows is because most bachelors can mend their own clothes and even cook in a pinch.
